ACHAIA et EPIRUS
CRETA et CYRENAICA
MACEDONIA

This map shows the Roman provinces of Macedonia, Achaia, and Crete and Cyrenaica, during the 2nd century AD, according to various sources.

During the 1st century AD, the southern parts of the province of Illyricum/Dalmatia were attached to the province of Macedonia. These parts contained the towns of Dyrrachium, Apollonia, Aulon, Albanopolis and Lychnidus, and some peoples belonging to the Illyrian (Illyri) like the Taulantii, the Albani, the Parthini, the Dassaretae, the Bulliones and the Amantiones.

During this period, these three provinces were governed by a proconsul or a propraetor each. In general, the situation during this period was similar to that of the 1st century BC. (check Map 4 and the accompanying text).
